

A-bike, no less

Saturday, 16 December 2006

Last Updated Saturday, 05 September 2009

This article appeared in BBC New on Wednesday, 12 July 2006The inventor who specialises in making miniature objects has a new big idea. A collapsible bike designed to fit a commuter journey as easily as it folds to squeeze into a bag.He brought us the pocket calculator and the ZX Spectrum, the digital wristwatch and the ill-fated C5 road buggy. Now Sir Clive Sinclair has turned his attentions to the humble bicycle. Read the full article on BBC News